The NRA has had some changes in the works and will release them very soon. We want to make sure NRA Training Counselors are adequately and accurately informed so you can pass on the correct information to all those instructors that you have mentored and conducted training for throughout the years. Please let your instructors know that the NRA strives to create the courses that you want to teach and that your students want to take.

To that end, we have continued to fine tune the NRA Basics of Pistol Shooting program to give instructors and students the ability to choose the delivery method that best suits their needs. There will be significant improvements to the existing Blended Learning version as well as the introduction of a NRA Basics of Pistol Shooting, Instructor Led Training (ILT) version, both of which will be conducted entirely under the direct supervision of an Instructor.

These changes will give NRA Certified Pistol Instructors the ability to administer both types of training in its entirety, and the freedom to choose the method based on the needs of the student.

The NRA will be sending an email with a full list of the changes to all NRA Instructors on March 22, 2017, with an official release date of April 4, 2017. In the meantime, we are counting on you to inform the instructors you have certified, of the upcoming changes.

On April 4, 2017, there will be an acknowledgement on the NRAInstructors.org sign-in page that pops up after logging into your account. This will be the notification that the enhancements are active, and you may begin to teach either course at your discretion.

The NRA worked with TCs to develop this program and listened to their concerns, thoughts and ideas. The following is some feedback provided by some of your fellow TCs:

Klint Macro, Pittsburgh, PA:

The 2017 evolution of the NRA Basics of Pistol Shooting course makes it easier for NRA Instructors to accomplish the goal of helping our fellow law abiding citizens become safe, confident and competent with firearms. The improvements give the end user a choice of training options and also helps the instructor cultivate a relationship with their students. Instructors will have the option to teach all handgun types, or focus specifically on semi-autos or revolvers. For students who prefer it, they have the option to enroll in a 100% instructor-led course, attending the NRA Basics of Pistol Shooting Course live and in person from start to finish. These enhancements provide more options, including convenience for the student and flexibility for the instructor. I believe NRA has satisfied the needs of students and instructors, while maintaining a focus on the ultimate goal.

Larry Pope, Cleveland, OH:

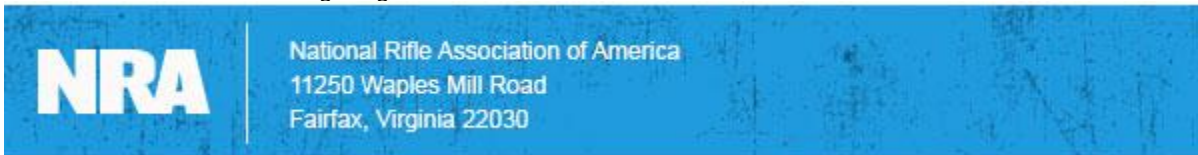

The National Rifle Association is the national standard for firearms education and training. After two years of research and development, the Education and Training Division launched the Basics of Pistol Shooting Course introducing many to the Blending Learning instructional method. For many, this opened the door to formal firearms training using technology and innovation. It gave a group of hearing impaired students an option for training. The millennial generation embraced the program because it gave them the ability to learn using a method of instruction that they are familiar with and can complete in the comfort of their homes and their schedule. However, the NRA realized that students learn differently and the Instructor Led method was the preferred method for some students and Instructors alike. NRA listen to the concerns of NRA Certified Instructors and the community and has decided to launch the Basics of Pistol Shooting Instructor Led course. The new release will have an updated shooting qualification and Performance Requirements Checklist that will aid the student and Instructor during the classroom and range portions of the course. As a proud NRA member and trainer, I am thrilled to have another tool in my toolbox to empower students while advocating for the Second Amendment.

Steven Reed, Ann Arbor, MI:

Based upon the feedback from instructors and training counselors, a revamped Basic Pistol Course (Phase I and II) and an instructor-led-only Basic Pistol Course option are being released. The blended training / instructor-led format will continue with some improvements, and with a substantial discount for instructors to purchase access codes for Phase I (computer preview). Students can now choose the format that works best with their learning style and their busy schedule. Instructors will be able to teach both formats or focus on the one that meshes best with their approach. These changes allow the NRA to keep up its commitment to expand shooting sports through quality classes. Congratulations to the NRA for once again setting the industry "gold standard" for firearm courses!!!

Final implementation of the online registration process is in progress and will be tested and completed prior to the public announcement on April 4. New Pistol Instructor Lesson Plans for your Training Counselor Guide, as well as an updated Blended Lesson Plan, the Instructor Led Lesson Plan and additional information will be available for download as PDF files on www.nrainstructors.org on April 4, 2017. Please urge all of your instructor candidates to verify that their email address and contact information is up to date on www.nrainstructors.org so that they receive all updates and email blasts. Thank you for your leadership and service as NRA Training Counselors. We are grateful for your continued commitment to NRA Training Programs.
